Humanities (HUMS)

HUMS 101: College Success & Building Community (1 unit)

Description: This one-unit course will provide students with the opportunity to learn about and access resources on and off campus that will support their efforts to become confident and successful students. Students will be introduced to university and college procedures, and participate in activities designed to identify, define and support their educational, career and personal goals. As students explore these resources, not only will they develop an understanding of the community and the university as a whole, but they will also develop an understanding and appreciation for the history, culture and value that a degree in the Humanities provides.

Grading basis: Regular Grades

Success Course: Success Course

HUMS 150B1: Mind-Altering Substances in the Ancient World (3 units)

Description: This course will be an introduction to the many uses of psychotropic substances in the ancient world. We will explore the different roles that these mind-altering substances played within various religious and medical traditions and investigate the role of Cannabis, psychedelics and alcohol within the economic, social and political realms of antiquity. In order to do this, we will read portions of primary texts in translation and learn to interpret visual and material culture. The primary focus will be to understand how these psychotropic substances were employed within all aspects of society. By understanding the various uses of psychotropic substances in a comparative context, students may better understand how to think critically about the role of drugs beyond their recreational use, thereby fostering an understanding of different cultures and their uses of psychotropics.

HUMS 374: Pop Music and the Counterculture: The 1960's (3 units)

Description: "The Times They Are A-Changin'" is the title of a Bob Dylan song from 1964. This captures the emerging mood in America during this decade of transformation. The various popular musical styles developed during this era were a reflection of the social, cultural, religious, political and sexual changes in our society. This course will examine the context in which that music was made, exploring the unique style of pop music in the Sixties that reflect a broader set of social values. Students will explore American rock, folk, jazz, and blues traditions. The focus will be on leaders such as Bob Dylan, the Beatles, the Rolling Stones, Jimi Hendrix, Cream, and the Doors.

HUMS 376: Global Soccer (3 units)

Description: This interdisciplinary course is about the emergence and growing notoriety of soccer in France, the Francophone world, and the rest of the planet. While the British invented "football" (as soccer is known around the world) and professional football, the French were key players in structuring it worldwide. Following in the steps of Pierre de Coubertin who revived the Olympic Games at the end of the 19th century, French compatriots Jules Rimet, Robert Guérin, Henri Delaunay, Jacques de Ryswick, Gabriel Hanot, Jacques Goddet, and Jacques Ferran were central figures in the creation of the most important soccer institutions as of today: Fédération Internationale de Football Association (FIFA) in 1904, the FIFA World Cup Soccer in 1930, the Union of European Football Associations (UEFA) in 1954, the UEFA Coupe d'Europe des Clubs Champions Européens (Champions League) in 1955, and the Ballon d'Or (Golden Ball Award) in 1956. The course provides a strong foundation in the history and development of soccer in France, the Francophone world, and as a worldwide global phenomenon through explorations in the following areas: cultural and global studies, philosophy, history, institutions, the arts, and language. The course presents several important themes that will allow us to understand the popularity and identification of the populations with soccer worldwide, as well as the human values it represents: olympism, pacifism, imperialism, colonialism, national identities, race, politics, gender, and globalization. Students will read and discuss some of the most important scholarly texts dealing with soccer.
